

Panacea Applications Health Check

Safeguard your IT investment by demanding optimal performance from your applications!

A business management environment will adapt and develop organically over time with responses to user requirements, technology updates and infrastructure changes. As a result of this, a regular business systems health check is highly recommended.

The application health check is essentially a means of expertly identifying areas in your system which are not functioning optimally and, as a result, impacting your IT investment.

What does a health check consist of?

Panacea's expert consultants will undertake to:

- Check principal technical configurations and setup parameters
- Appraise the suitability of existing infrastructure
- Check the performance of applications
- Review applications against requirements of business processes.

What are the benefits of a health check?

The health check report gives confidence to the users that they are making the most of their IT investment and that the system is performing efficiently and able to scale and respond to future business demands.

Just some of the benefits that can be provided include:

- Performance improvement through greater efficiency and access to more business information
- Identification of profit improvement areas for streamlining business processes achieving maximum return on investment
- Enhanced functionality and user-friendliness for employees for improved effectiveness and greater staff utilisation.

How long does it take to perform a health check?

A health check review and report is delivered on most systems in THREE working days. Large or complex systems, however, require longer periods to perform detailed review and analysis.

What will the result of the health check consist of?

A full written report and subsequent review of the system under inspection will be presented to you to allow for feedback and further discussion. The report will also contain recommendations for improvements that will deliver REAL business benefits to your business.
